When it comes to the redesign of my User Persona and website itself, I think I have very slightly improved on my knowledge of coding and improved the User Persona from my previous one.

Previously, my website ended up slightly broken due to mishaps in my code, due to lack of knowledge and feedback, so I improved by writing down the feedback I was given about the website and tried my best to get rid of each problem that was mentioned. First off, I fixed the problem that occurred from having excessive gap values and fixed-with elements which meant the website page was different on other screens and to my understanding, caused odd horizontal scrolling. I fixed this issue by adding certain code to make everything fit as it should. I also fixed the images in the gallery section to show as last time they were broken because I had forgotten to provide the images in the folder previously, but now they work as intended. I updated the contact form page and added an image banner to it to give it the same look as my other pages, so everything looks consistent and equally thought about, since I based my website off my personal interests. "I enjoy the overall visual aesthetic of the website, and I feel that it accurately relates to the style of the artist!". I also improved my file names and added updates to my GitHub profile which I had not done previously, and it's helped me keep track of what I fixed and updated.

When it comes to weaknesses and aspects that needed improvement, the first thing I think of is the fonts on my website and how I was unable to find a reason as to why they don't show up when I implement them, I have tried asking for help, and doing research but I could not find an answer as to why my fonts were broken and never worked, it was most likely an issue with some code in the CSS file that I missed, or the font itself but it is unfortunate that I could never figure out how to properly add them to my website as I think it could have added a lot of flare to it, "Overall, I like how the website looks it has an interesting style to it. But it could benefit from having a unique font that would push the website's look and feel just a bit further". Another thing I wish I could have done to my website is adding more to it in terms of animations, unique looking and interesting features and more, but I feel as if I am not at the skill level of adding these things. I think if I had more time and knowledge, I would have done a lot more to my website.

After testing the website given please give honest feedback and opinions on the usability, looks and functionality!

I enjoy the overall visual aesthetic of the website, and I feel that it accurately relates to the style of the artist! The website is easy to navigate, and I particularly enjoyed the navigation bar at the bottom. On the other hand, whilst the website has a pleasing design, the text color is quite similar to the background, which makes it kind of hard to read. I did not encounter any issues while navigating the website, and everything worked well on my end.

Overall, I like how the website looks it has an interesting style to it. But It could benefit from having a unique font that would push the website's look and feel just a bit further. The website is functional with all the webpages linking together. There is nothing really I would change in that aspect only that maybe you could have added hover effects to the images in the gallery or made them inspect-able when a user clicks on them. The Website is easy to navigate through, with clear text on the navigation bar denoting what button takes you where . I would personally change nothing when it comes to usability
